My name is Taylor Miller, MPH, CD, and I bring nearly a decade of hands-on experience across diverse healthcare environments, including private and nonprofit organizations, community health programs, schools, and clinical settings. I am looking to support your business, program, and or health initiatives as an independent consultant. Throughout my career, I have worked directly with patients, families, multidisciplinary providers, and community stakeholders—giving me a comprehensive understanding of healthcare systems, population health, health disparities, and the operational challenges organizations face when delivering equitable, effective care. I have managed to secure an additional $275,000 for a community health program, events, and lead initial implementation.

In my role as a clinical health educator, I provide individualized patient consultations as a non-licensed provider, facilitate group classes, and triage key topic areas in pediatrics, prenatal care, and women's health. I specialize in curriculum implementation, behavior change strategies, and evidence-informed health education. I am also supporting new pilot initiatives and curriculum development in pediatric healthy weight classes. I serve as a pediatric subject matter expert in behavior and parenting for children 0-5 years of age on our team. My strengths include synthesizing clinical research into actionable guidance, identifying gaps in care delivery, evaluating program content, and supporting informed, shared decision-making.

My public health education has equipped me with strong competencies in gap analysis, program design, content development, health communication, behavior change theory, project coordination, and equity-centered approaches. These skills translate directly into consulting—particularly in areas such as workflow evaluation, educational training, curriculum development, and strategic planning for population health initiatives and programs.

I am eager to bring my experience, analytical mindset, and commitment to health equity to consulting opportunities that support organizations in strengthening programs, improving patient outcomes, and advancing community well-being. I look forward to the possibility of contributing to meaningful and measurable impact. Thank you for taking the time to consider my work. I look forward to working in various opportunities to be able to provide resources, education, assistance, and guidance for communities while being able to support the work you do. Please connect with me at: taylorlouisemph@gmail.com.

With Kindness and in Good Health,
Taylor Louise Miller, MPH, CD
